The clinic was opened in the latter part of the following September. This of the following September. The newly formed concern has the sole tain the members at their home, 1739 other existing clinics. It is an evening clinic, for white women and children. Its special aim is to lend a helping hand to the wage-carning woman of small income. It is attended by women physicians only. Up to January 1, 1915, during a period of fifteen months, over 400 different patients were enrolled. These made a total of 2,200 visits to the clinic for consultation and treatment. Clinicians made over 350 visits to these patients in their homes or in hos-pitals. This is an average of 147 visits a month to the clinic. During the last three months the visits have been just treble what they were the first three months.

The largest attendance for any day has been reached on two occasionstwenty. Eighteen per cent of the patients are children. Of the adult patients, 54 per cent are wage-earnwomen, and 44 per cent are nousewives. The organiastion has demonstrated
